'Privacy Chat' Draws Huge Participation

by Mark Stanley [1]
October 27, 2010

This past Tuesday, CDT moderated the first weekly 'privacy chat' on Twitter through our @CenDemTech [2] account. If participation and volume are measuring sticks, it was a great success. Over 600 tweets were sent out on Tuesday featuring our chat hashtag #PrivChat. Of course, numbers alone don't equal success. The ultimate goal of features like the privacy chat and Ask CDT [3] is to better engage Internet users on online privacy. Through our Take Back Your Privacy campaign [4], we offer the opportunity to turn knowledge about privacy issues into action.

A special thanks is owed to @PrivacyCamp [5]'s Shaun Dakin, who worked tirelessly to raise awareness and organize the privacy chat, and to CDT privacy experts Justin Brookman (@JustinBrookman [6]) and Erica Newland (@EricaNewland [7]), who replied to questions and comments during the chat.

You can see a transcript of the chat here [8]. If you have topic suggestions for #PrivChat, please leave them in the comments section below and include your name and/or Twitter handle in the comment. We hope to see you at the next #PrivChat, Tuesday, noon eastern.

-
- Twitter
- privacy chat
- privacy

Copyright © 2013 by Center for Democracy & Technology.
The content through Center for Democracy & Technology CDT can be freely copied and used as long as you make no substantive changes and clearly give us credit. Details.
Source URL: https://cdt.org/blogs/mark-stanley/privacy-chat-draws-huge-participation

Links:
[1] https://cdt.org/personnel/mark-stanley
[2] http://twitter.com/#!/CenDemTech
[3] http://cdt.org/blogs/cdt/ask-cdt-answers-social-media-privacy
[4] http://cdt.org/takebackyourprivacy
[5] http://twitter.com/#!/PrivacyCamp
[6] http://twitter.com/#!/JustinBrookman
[7] http://twitter.com/#!/ericanewland
[8] http://wthashtag.com/Privchat